Savage Counterattacks Force U. S. Fifth Army To Give Ground in Italy

Gen. Eisenhower Is Bringing Up Reserves as Hour of Crisis Draws Near in Effort To Hold Bridgehead; British Eighth Army Is Rushing Up from Southern Italy To Form Junction with Clark's Forces

By WILLIAM SMITH WHITE
LONDON, Sept. 14 (AP)—Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth American Army was locked in a bitter battle at Salerno today, but the British Eighth Army was lashing up from the South and the decision was yet to fall as to whether this was to be the first great Allied defeat in Italy or whether it was likely to be the enemy's last spasm of effective resistance in the lower part of the peninsula.

Certainly the Allies already had suffered a serious setback, and it appeared that even the Salerno bridgehead, so hard won, was in danger. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters conceded that it had lost ground before savage counterattacks.

Crisis Draws Near

As the hour of crisis drew near, Eisenhower was reported bringing up reserves for a supreme effort to hold the bridgehead against the sharpest menace thrown against the Allies since the campaign for Italy proper began.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, however, was moving his Eighth Army at a great rate. His columns on the right had overrun and passed Ban, while his left wing had engulfed Cosenza. By nightfall yesterday he was within less than 100 miles of a juncture with Clark's hard-pressed forces on the beaches of the Gulf of Salerno.

More than 4,300 Germans were killed and 1,000 captured in the fighting yesterday, said a communiqué broadcast from Moscow and recorded by the Soviet Monitor. Town after town fell to the Soviet offensive.

Russian troops were said to have fought offensive engagements in the Bryansk sector and "captured several populated places," but there was no official mention by Moscow of the seizure of the strategic rail junction city.

Nazis Fighting Desperately

A Reuters dispatch from Moscow said Red army forces had stormed Bryansk while the Nazis fought to gain time for their torch squads to fire or blow up everything that could not be moved.

The Russians were apparently making certain that they had the town of Bryansk securely in their grasp before making any announcement of its capture. Regarding the fighting in that area the communiqué said that the Red army troops "continued their offensive and captured several populated places."

The verdict was announced just six hours after the court began deliberation on more than a week of testimony. It is subject to review by the War department in Washington and the sentence will not take effect until finally approved.

In all the government presented twenty-eight charges against Col. Colman. He pleaded innocent on all of them and at the opening of the trial sought their dismissal on the ground he had been suffering from a mental disorder. The court denied his motion.

The major charge against Col. Colman was the shooting and wounding of Private William R. McRae, negro chauffeur at the base here last May 5. The original charge on this count was assault with intent to do bodily harm. The court reduced this to carelessness of fire arms.

Since then their forces began smashing the Germans back across the Ukraine, routing Hitler's armies out of one strong point after another. The Russians have permitted their retreating enemies first to announce "strategic" withdrawals before themselves proclaiming a Soviet victory, frequently in a special order of the day by Premier Marshal Joseph Stalin.

In its only mention of the Bryansk sector, tonight's Russian war bulletin said merely that Red army troops in that area "fought offensive engagements and captured several populated places."

The Soviet communiqué, however, told of consistent gains along the whole Allied position in the Naples area.

All the details were not clear.

Judge Rosenman
Will Be Legal
Aide to F.D.R.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (AP)—Judge Samuel I. Rosenman, lone voice of President Roosevelt's advisors, is quitting the bench to devote full time to the job.

The president announced at his press conference today that the man qualified with originating many of the New Deal government reorganization moves is leaving the New York State Supreme Court to become his special counsel.

The move brings Rosenman back to the same official relationship to Mr. Roosevelt which he held when the latter was governor of New York—legal assistant.

Operating mostly in private, Rosenman has been a major factor in Roosevelt's councils even while he occupied the bench. He has divided time between New York and the White House.

Now 47, Rosenman has been closely associated with Mr. Roosevelt since 1928.

The Office of War Mobilization, which is in effect a home front cabinet headed by James F. Byrnes, is understood to have been Rosenman's idea, and also the Office of War Information, headed by Edward Davis.

He and the president became close friends during Mr. Roosevelt's 1928 campaign for governor of New York.

By JAMES M. LONG

LONDON, Wednesday, Sept. 15 (AP)—The Russians announced today that Red army forces had swept fifteen miles nearer Dnieperovetsk and gained in other sectors, but ignored a German statement that Nazi forces already had abandoned Bryansk.

More than 4,300 Germans were killed and 1,000 captured in the fighting yesterday, said a communiqué broadcast from Moscow and recorded by the Soviet Monitor. Town after town fell to the Soviet offensive.

Berlin Reports Mussolini Seeks To Cancel Surrender of Italy

Il Duce Has Taken Control of Puppet Regime,
Nazis Say

LONDON, Sept. 14 (AP)—Benito Mussolini had taken control of the new puppet Fascist national regime—then turned out another chapter in the confusing stream of narrations on the recent adventures of the No. 1 Fascist.

In announcing Mussolini's new role, the Nazis said he had sought to cancel Italy's surrender to the Allies and had decreed an end to the rule of the House of Savoy.

A diplomat in Bern said it was expected that Mussolini's declaration rejecting the House of Savoy and formally announcing his new regime would be issued within two days.

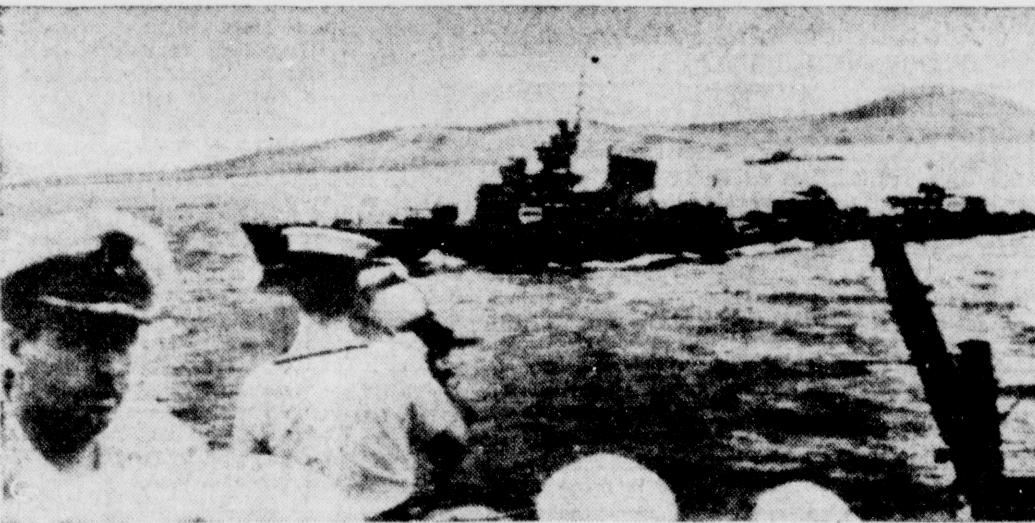

The addition to the story of Mussolini's activities since his deposition came via the Berlin radio when it told the world that Mussolini had been held on a 9,500-foot plateau in the mountainous Abruzzi E Molise department east of Rome.

Col. William Colman Or-

SELFRIFFE FIELD, Mich., Sept. 14 (AP)—Col. William T. Colman, 39-year-old former commandant of this big army air base, was convicted by a court martial today on carelessness of firearms and on four counts of drunkenness and ordered reduced in rank to a captaincy.

He was acquitted on all other charges including allegations that he fraudulently arranged the transfer of military personnel to the field here, that he had accepted a gift from a contractor engaged on work for the government and that he had misappropriated government property and labor services.

In directing Col. Colman's reduction in rank, the court martial of eight colonels and one lieutenant-colonel ordered that he be placed at the foot of the list of captains, not to be promoted for three years.

The verdict was announced just six hours after the court began deliberation on more than a week of testimony. It is subject to review by the War department in Washington and the sentence will not take effect until finally approved.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (AP)—Rep. Gross (R-Pa.) introduced legislation today providing that no pre-Pearl Harbor fathers be inducted until all convicts between the ages of 18 and 45 and physically fit have been drafted.

Measure Would Draft
Convicts before Fathers

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (AP)—The right of a newspaper to criticize judicial action was upheld today in a decision dismissing a contempt conviction of Ralph B. Chandler, publisher of the Mobile Press and Register.

Probate Judge Norville R. Leigh Jr., hearing a habeas corpus proceeding, ruled that "after a court has rendered final judgment any one may criticize such final judgment as he pleases subject only to criminal prosecution and civil suit if his criticism be slanderous or libelous."

In answer to a question by Thomas E. Twitty, attorney for the publisher, Judge Leigh said this paragraph did not mean that a newspaper was necessarily liable for entire fighting front of up to fifteen miles and claimed the capture of more than 350 more towns, villages and rail centers as the on-rushing Russian armies "continued successfully to develop their offensive."

A gain of from twelve to fifteen miles was claimed west of Stalingrad, where more than 150 inhabited places, including eight large towns, fell to the Soviet advance. Similar progress was claimed along the shores of the Sea of Azov, with the capture of the district center of Mangush, twelve miles west of Mariupol, and in the Kharovsk and Nezhin sectors where Russian columns were lancing deep into the rich Ukraine. In Monday's fighting the Russians claimed destruction of ninety-two German tanks and thirteen enemy planes.

Although the Soviets did not claim the capture of Bryansk, today's German broadcast told with great detail of the Nazis' withdrawal from the ancient fortress city. The Germans declared they had evacuated the city in good order after stripping it of military stores and installations.

The capture of Bryansk would be the greatest Russian victory since Kharkov fell Aug. 2. There seemed little doubt that the Russians soon would be back in the city, perhaps by dawn. The Soviet command might have withheld announcement of the city's fall to avoid the risk of a premature claim of victory until the Germans were hurled back from positions where they might be poised for a counterattack.

from the Netherlands East Indies through New Guinea and into the Northern Solomons. It lies only 150 miles southwest of New Britain where the Japanese have their strongest base in the entire area at Rabaul.

The death-stands of previous campaigns in New Guinea were abandoned by the enemy at Salerno. They fled from the town just as they had from the airfield the previous day. Thus they relinquished a base they had held since January 25, 1942.

The Allied headquarters announced that Liberator bombers made another roundtrip flight of more than 2,000 miles to strike at the oil center of Makassar on Dutch Celebes.

as to what had happened at Salerno, but this much seemed plain:

1. Our forces were so far advanced from our fighter airfields as to be under rather thin air cover.

2. The terrain favored the enemy, for he occupied hilly positions and our troops were out in the open flats.

3. The Germans had anticipated the area of our landing and were in greater strength than we had thought. Moreover, the Germans had received reinforcements.

The Nazis reacted with wild exultation to the turn of the wheel of fortune against the Allies, issuing large claims that some Allied troops had fled in transports down the gulf of Salerno and that American casualties were 8,000 to 10,000 men.

These sensational accounts had not the slightest confirmation. So far as could be judged from here, the Nazi were basing them in part on their reports of the landings of Allied troops in the Gulf of Pollicastro, farther down the coast.

Such landings, of course, could have represented the arrival of Allied reinforcements rather than Allied evacuations. The sea was still firmly in Allied hands.

Fifth army. Bari as well as Cosenza had fallen.

The Allied communiqué said:

"Heavy fighting continues on the Fifth army front. The Germans are counter-attacking desperately and at certain points have regained some of the ground previously taken by us."

The extreme depth of the beachheads was six or seven miles at some places. The city of Salerno (Pop. 77,000) remained in Allied hands.

The air was streaked with incessant dogfights as the Germans hurled more and more fighter-bombers into the battle. Allied planes, 150 miles from their nearest usable landing field, bombed roads and railways leading to Salerno, striving nightly to delay or prevent German reinforcements.

A German broadcast declared Nazi tank formations had swept from the mountain heights before Salerno onto the coastal plains and were "engaged in breaking enemy resistance on the coasts of the sea." The enemy broadcast claimed that strong Allied detachments had been cut off from their landing points.

Cosenza (Pop. 40,000) is near the toe of the Italian toe, 120 miles from the city of Salerno. It fell after a ten-mile British advance.

Bari (pop. 200,000) is on the Adriatic 112 miles across the Southern Apennine mountains from Salerno. It was taken after sixty-five-mile sprint from Brindisi and its capture gave the Allies 125 miles of Adriatic coastline threatening the Balkans.

Montgomery's pace was rapid because Southern Italy was only lightly defended. The rough nature of the country and the effective demolitions probably will prevent his joining the Fifth army for a week or so, and the Fifth was under immediate, incessant pressure.

The bridgehead was on the Gulf of Salerno below the city. It was under continuous assault by the German Fifteenth and Sixteenth tank and the Hermann Goering infantry shock divisions. Nazi warplanes bombed and strafed the Allies from airfields forty miles away. The Allies still held air supremacy but the lack of nearby fields prevented their using short-range fighters.

The worst punishment of all was dealt by German artillery, long established in the hills fringing the sandy beaches. Their fire could be laid in any sector of the Fifth army strip, and the white and explosive crashes of 88-millimeter shells allowed the weary Americans and Britons no rest from battle.

"In the Salerno area, heavy battles are still in progress north of the city with British divisions which are defending themselves desperately," the German communiqué said. "enemy attacks against height positions to the south of Eboli (fifteen miles southeast of Salerno) have been bloody repulsed after a hard fight and our troops in this part started an attack on a broad front. The enemy positions were taken and the enemy was thrown back to his landing places.

The tremendous effort made by the Germans on the ground and in the air bore out the widespread belief that Hitler was going to fight the battle of Europe in Italy. Fresh German troops swept toward Salerno.

no from Marshal Rommel in Northern Italy. Lacking strategic reserves, Hitler could only be drawing his planes and divisions from France and Russia.

Meanwhile, Allied sea strength was given a tremendous boost by the arrival of more Italian warships in the Malta harbor, bringing the total of seventy-seven.

A delayed dispatch from Mark Watson, Baltimore Sun correspondent with the Fifth army, said German troops were far from being beaten or even discouraged and were making counterattacks "without disturbing our firmly-anchored positions." His dispatch was sent Monday, covering action apparently referred to in today's communiqué.

Heavy, medium and light Allied bombers concentrated again on the web of highways and railway junctions around the Naples and Salerno area.

The area of Pompei, destroyed in an eruption of Vesuvius in A.D. 79, was visited with modern damage by day and night attacks on its communications. Other targets were Torre Del Greco on the Bay of Naples, German installations south of Salerno, railway and enemy transport in the Potenza and Avella areas and in the Sala Consilina sector, fifty miles southwest of Salerno.

Three Allied planes were lost. The Allies shot down thirteen enemy ships, including ten of the 100 or so Nazi fighters-bombers over the Salerno battle. Pilots said the German fliers often were inexperienced.

The battle for Salerno was in its second expected crisis, the counter-attack phase which is inevitable after a landing. The climax was not yet.

One officer at headquarters summed up the crucial fighting at Salerno in these words:

"The fighting is extremely heavy and it certainly is the bitterest land fighting encountered by an Allied landing force in this war."

With Senator Wheeler (D-Mont) and others demanding an immediate ban on induction of fathers, Chairman Reynolds (D-NC) of the Senate Military committee announced that hearings on the subject would begin tomorrow. Members of the House Military committee were asked to sit jointly with the Senate group.

Reynolds listed as the first witness Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, who recently completed a tour of Pacific fronts; Lt. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, deputy chief of staff; Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of naval operations, and Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service.

Wheeler to Press Bill

He said that Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, would testify next Monday—an indication that a committee decision would be deferred at least a week.

The hearings technically will be on a bill by Wheeler to forbid the induction of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers before next Jan. 1. Wheeler announced, however, that he would not await committee action, would try to bring his bill up on the floor as early as possible, and would amend it to forbid the induction of fathers indefinitely.

Indications were that he would have no chance before Thursday at the earliest to bring up his bill.

Reynolds' call for hearings was in line with strategy of administration leaders in trying to delay a vote on the Wheeler bill.

Most of the Congress members arrived for renewal of the session with a variety of prepared speeches—on man power, farm labor, rationing and policies of the Office of Price Administration.

uppermost in virtually all minds, and most of the prepared speeches were simply put into the congressional record without delivery on the floor.

When the draft issue was brought up on the House floor, Rep. Knutson (R-Minn) demanded to know "what has become" of Winston Churchill's pre-Pearl Harbor request to the United States to "send us the implements and we'll do the job."

Wheeler read a Canadian announcement of the disbanding of two and a half divisions of Canadian troops, a matter which also was brought to the attention of the House by Chairman May (D-Ky) of the Military committee.

Canada's action, May declared, appeared to be an irrefutable argument against the drafting of fathers in the United States.

Wheeler told the Senate that many men in the army had been kept in training camps twelve to eighteen months "because there apparently wasn't anything for them to do."

"This lying around in army camps is breaking down the morale of the men and the people who know about it," Wheeler said, characterizing the proposal to draft fathers as "a most idiotic plan."

Gasoline Racketeering Should Be Routed Out

WHETHER the local men arrested by United States government officials under charges of engaging in a gasoline black market are the guilty persons is, of course, a matter for the federal courts to decide.

But it appears that these arrests are the result of the unerring detection of a big black marketing operation, which because of its alleged magnitude hereabout naturally suggests the inference that it has been of a wide scope, perhaps nationwide. Government officials are reported as asserting that "millions of gallons" of gasoline have been disposed of in Cumberland, other Maryland towns and in West Virginia communities, this city having been "flooded" in consequence of the illegal disposition of rationing coupons.

Where there is so much smoke, there must be fire, and government investigators do not usually launch prosecutions until they are pretty sure something grounds their efforts.

According to the news accounts, the investigations made in this case by OPA and federal Justice department agents and the local police have been of a thorough and diligent nature, for which they are deserving of credit from the community. It is needless to say that it is hoped the probe will continue vigilant and unremitting until the bottom is knocked out of this suspected black market racketeering.

This sort of work will serve to mitigate a feeling of resentment on the part of many who have decried the OPA gasoline rationing system because they have been patriotically limiting their own gasoline use only to see others sailing around in a free and easy manner apparently as the result of getting all the gasoline they wanted. The local development indicates that the blame should have been placed not on the rationing system, which has obviously been necessary because of acute war needs, but on the chiselers and those who have aided and abetted them.

A Destructive Concept

PAUL MALLON, Washington correspondent, makes an impressive point in his dispatch published elsewhere on this page today, which deserves the earnest consideration of all thoughtful American citizens.

Discussing what he describes as a world revolution, which is not only to be faced in the postwar period but is now at hand as the result of the development of the totalitarian ideology abroad, which he says has had considerable infiltration here, Mallon puts his finger on the fundamental error of the effort to meet it in this country.

The Washington administration has ostensibly been seeking to cope with this trend toward socialism—that movement which transfers the idea that the state is no longer the creature of man but to the converse notion—by erecting an overall government insurance plan. By this, job security would be taken from initiative, industry and frugality of the individual and placed in the hands of a paternal government.

But Mallon declares that the real remedy for unemployment is not state insurance but employment, that is, free opportunity for employment and not reliance on government. He is dead right about that. A decent measure of security for the unemployed we should have, of course, but the use of a government plan for everybody to dull the sense of duty to make a livelihood and to develop one's talents and resources is a destructive concept, indeed.

The Brenner Pass Again Important

THE INVASION OF ITALY brings again into prominence the historic Brenner pass, wherein Hitler and Mussolini were wont to have their consultations, because it is the most important link between Central Germany and Northeastern Italy. Its present importance has been shown by the fact that American Flying Fortresses are reported to have bombed the railway in it.

Before Germany took over Unoccupied France after the Allied landing in Morocco and Tunisia last November, the Brenner pass was probably the most important of all land communications between Germany and its chief satellite. Now this may have to be through Southeastern France.

The pass, less than 4,500 feet above sea level at its greatest height, is the lowest of the passes through the main range of the Alps into Italy. It is about seventy miles long and it is about fifty miles between Innsbruck in Austria to Bolzano in Italy. It was known as the Great Gate of Italy before rail communications thereto were made possible through Switzerland by the construction of tunnels, such as the Simplon, twelve miles long, and the Gotthard, ten miles in length. These tunnels, however, may be blocked by partial destruction on the part of neutral Switzerland should Germany attempt to use them for troop or munitions movements.

There is a double-tracked railroad through the pass and a motor highway follows the bed of the old carriage road built in 1702. While there are sixty-seven bridges and twenty-two tunnels, the latter are short and the most of the rail line is on the surface. Thus the pass is quite vulnerable to air assault and, as the Allies have superiority in the air, the pass may prove a vital factor in the Italian campaign because, while it is serviceable for the transmission of supplies to the Germans, it is also necessary for a close and quick exit, and if it is blocked the Germans in Italy could be trapped. This is probably what will happen.

The pass is an historic gateway. Through it the Roman legions made many marches into Central Europe in the great days of Rome, and later it was the route used by most of the barbarian tribes for their invasions of the Italian peninsula. There is a striking similarity between it as a passageway and the Narrows here in Cumberland, which is the chief gateway to the West through the Alleghenies.

WE ARE Faced with world revolution as well as a world war. It will not be over when the war is over. We must plan our way. It is not a new revolution, not alone a political revolution, but a revolution of ethics and culture. It started unnoticeably back in the revolutionary philosophies of Nietzsche and Freud, as well as Marx.

While Marx is the glorified prophet of the anti-democratic societies which have sprung into being in ever-widening scope since the last war, Nietzsche and Freud are the non-political re-socializers whose so-called enlightenment lured great masses of people away from their ethics and social ways and plunged them into this dazzling materialistic era in which we are now groping our way toward yet indiscernible solutions.

Employment Is Urged as Check For Revolution

By PAUL MALLON

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 14—Here are some excerpt-thoughts from a talk I made today to the New York state newspaper publishers' convention:

We are faced with world revolution as well as a world war. It will not be over when the war is over. We must plan our way. It is not a new revolution, not alone a political revolution, but a revolution of ethics and culture. SYNOPSIS

ADAM NORTH, young bachelor who recently converted an old Linville buggy factory into a war plant, becomes a "fill-in" stand-by for the town's party givers, among them being

SUSAN POTTER, whose husband, Bill, has lately been breaking evening dates to "negotiate" a real estate deal with ALICIA CARTER, a wily, flirtatious widow. Adam, unknowingly, is loved by his secretary.

RUTH MOOREHOUSE, who at present is having difficult dissuading the affections of JACK VINTON, a mechanic in the plant. Adam, not being aware of Ruth's feelings, is just becoming intrigued with

BRENDA LEIGH, who is now enjoying an extended vacation in Linville, which she left several years ago to launch a journalistic career in New York City.

YESTERDAY: Susan's new attention to her appearance and acceptance of a dietitian's job in Adam's factory bring about a change of heart with Husband Bill, who decided to wind up the Alicia Carter real estate deal in short order. Upon arriving home that night, his suddenly warmed heart gets a chilling from Susan when she states she is going out for the evening. Mrs. Platt, one of Linville's social leaders, is producing an amateur play, and Susan is going over to help.

CHAPTER TEN

THAT EVENING, while Bill studied blueprints of small cottages, and while Susan and Brenda made plans with Mrs. Platt, Jack Vinton and Ruth Moorehouse went for a ride. They changed their minds about going to a movie.

"I've been shut up in the office all day," said Ruth. "I'd like to feel the wind against my face. That is, if you've gas enough for a drive."

"I have enough to take us out the Vaughan highway," said Jack.

"Anyway, enough to get us as far as a cottage I want to show you."

There, it's coming again, Ruth thought; Jack and his talk of marriage. He had told her about the cottage, describing it in glowing terms, and she knew he was going to talk now of how happy they would be in it when they were married and peace had come once more.

Ruth said nothing and tried to relax. As Jack steered the car in and out of Linville's traffic, which was almost cosmopolitan in its denseness, she let her thoughts dwell on many things. But mostly she thought of how she had always wanted a home of her own. Having been an orphan who'd been handed around from relative to relative until she had finished school and become capable of managing herself and her affairs, she had dreamed of being settled in a place she could call her own. And always before her had been the vision of a cottage like that in which Susan and Bill Potter lived. Colorful draperies, soft rugs, the right sort of pictures, and a sunroom, glass enclosed, in which breakfast could be served the year round—the glass slid back for warm weather, and closed for cold.

Of course there had always been a husband to share that perfect cottage, a man who would love and cherish her. But try as she might, she hadn't been able, during the past two years, to visualize Jack Vinton as that husband. Again and again she had tried, but always the husband resembled Adam North.

"I got my questionnaire late this afternoon," Jack said. "Gosh, it's a complicated affair."

Ruth looked at him, and suddenly felt fear. How awful for Jack, and thousands of young men like him, so full of health and promise, to be turned into what some people called cannon fodder. And yet, she further thought, she supposed it was as it should be. People had to fight to protect what was nearest and dearest, and she knew that the American way of life was just that. There were many things wrong, maybe, but no so many things wrong with democracies as with some other forms of government. She'd heard Adam discuss it in terms like that, and they had stuck. And yet it was tragic to think that maybe men like Jack, and Peter Platt, and those other Linville boys who were now in the service might be killed or maimed. Certainly there must be something terribly wrong somewhere, when wars kept on happening, even though the world was supposed to have advanced far along the road toward being completely civilized.

She remembered something else Adam had said. The words came back to her even as Jack chatted about his questionnaire and the cottage. "We have gone back to a sort of mechanized primitiveness," Adam had said one day in the office, when he seemed low and discouraged about several matters. "Back in the Stone Age men used big sticks," he had added, "but now we use monsters called tanks, and outrageous birds called bombers."

"Here we are!" said Jack. He brought the car to a stop before a white picket gate. "Isn't it a beauty?"

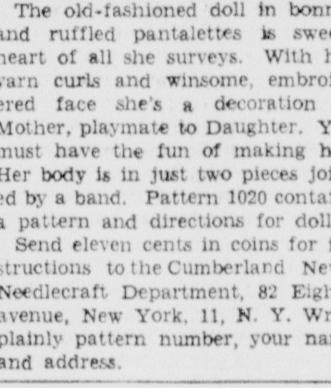

"Yes," said Ruth softly, "it is!" She sat looking at the fence, the front yard and the cottage. It was small and neat and homely. "I love it," she added.

"Come on," Jack urged, jumping up, "let's go have a look." He helped Ruth. "Sorry I didn't get the key, but now we use monsters called tanks, and outrageous birds called bombers."

explore the acre of land that goes with it."

This they did. The living room was square, with a wide fireplace, and bookshelves built low and generous on either side of the wide mantel. The moonlight was bright.

and it did its best to help them, pouring silver into the rooms and reaching even to the farthest corners. They looked into the other rooms, also—and stood for some time beside a small, glass-enclosed porch on the south side of the cottage. Ruth caught her breath when she saw this, for it was as though her dream cottage had suddenly materialized right there before her eyes and nose and face, as her old Aunt Carrie had had a habit of saying.

"Plenty of room in the living room for all my books on engineering and tool-making," said Jack. "And plenty of room here for us to sit and read the Sunday papers." He stepped closer to Ruth, slipped his arm about her slender waist. "Can't you just see Jack, Junior, and Ruth the Second, sprawled out on the floor looking at the funnies?"

"And sugar shortages," Jack laughed. "Oh, well, everything's going to be all right, once we get going. Just wait until I join Peter and the other Linville fellows! We'll

"This is no world in which to bring finish the scrap up in no time at all."

"I certainly hope so," Ruth said. "But until folks are sure if will, they oughtn't to bring babies into the world who'll have to grow up to be shot in World War III."

"You talk like a defeatist," Jack said, looking at her. "Don't do it, and the other Linville fellows! We'll

Small Banks Said To Face Crisis In Competition of the New Dealers

By FRANK MACMILLEN
NEW YORK, Sept. 14 (P)—Small town and country banks will have a stiff fight to survive in the post-war world in the face of competition from government lending agencies and non-banking lenders, the American Bankers Association was warned here.

A series of officials of small banks sounded a cautionary note in a meeting of some 2,000 bankers from all over the country for a war-time service meeting which supplanted the usual annual convention.

In the background of the country bankers' protests, it was learned, was a factional fight within the association with New Deal versus "conservative" background. The small-town men were said to be seeking to force more energetic protests from the National Association against government lending in competition with private capital.

Small Bankers Win
The small-bank group, it was understood, won an agreement at a closed caucus Sunday that the resolutions committee of the National Association at the final session Wednesday, would give them opportunity to go on record with their protest.

Officials of State Bankers Associations in Nebraska, Indiana, Iowa and Pennsylvania were in the forefront of the effort to stiffen the association's attitude toward Washington policies, while their opponents were said to think the present time was inopportune for a frontal assault on government lending.

Federal Lending Continues

"The emergency is long since past, but the activity of the government as a money lender in fields competitive with country banks continues to grow."

Pack, citing particularly the activity of the government sponsored Production Credit Association said:

"The element of subsidy together with the well-known vices of bureaucracy accounts for their ever-growing activity in a time when abounding war prosperity has taken the place of the great emergency to which they owe so much."

W. W. McEachern, president of the Union Trust Company, of St. Petersburg, Fla., said survival of the small bank depends on modernization of methods and practices.

To ease the transition between war and peace, he said, the small town banker "should counsel with his customers to devise the best ways and means to bridge the transition gap."

Charles W. Green of the Franklin

Square (N.Y.) National Bank, urged small town bankers to take the lead in directing present civilian savings power into channels which would provide a cushion of postwar spending

Liens Will Be Placed Against Those Who Did Not File Returns

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 14 (AP)—A prediction was made today by members of the state comptroller's office that "numerous" tax liens would be placed against wages of employees working in Maryland industries who failed to file income tax returns on their 1942 income.

The 1943 General Assembly adopted legislation providing for the attachment of employees' wages should they fail to file income tax returns or fail to make payment of the taxes due.

Officials of the income tax division said that the tabulations of all returns received this year had been completed and that the liens, or attachments, would be issued in the near future.

They said, meanwhile, that nearly thirty liens, totalling approximately $500, had been placed since Aug. 15, against wages of persons who failed to file returns or neglected to include payments with returns for 1939, 1940, and 1941. At least twenty per cent of these accounts have been collected, they added.

Two notices are mailed to delinquent taxpayers, the officials asserted, before the attachments are presented to employers.

Under the legislative act, the state comptroller has the power to enforce payment through attachment of real and personal property, salaries and wages. The liens can be effected whether or not they are for present or past due payments.

Income tax payments to the state through June 30 on 1942 returns totalled $6,767,619.23, with 226,766 taxable returns being filed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14 (AP)—Penicillin, the rare drug which aided two-year-old Patricia Malone in her fight last month against septic poisoning, could not help her today when she was reported in a critical condition at Lutheran hospital.

The child has been suffering from a weakened heart for the past several days, her physician, Dr. Michael Garofalo said, and she took a turn for the worse yesterday.

"She has a real fight on her hands now," the physician said, adding that her need for penicillin had passed long since. The army released the drug to her after the intervention of Paul Schoenstein, city editor of the New York Journal-American.

Plan To Stabilize

of the present burden of comparing prices with the frequently changing OPA ceiling lists.

"Business would be on a more normal basis and at each level there would be assurance that living costs were being held down and prices, despite some variance from store to store, would be at a level controlled by the ceiling profit. There would result a stabilization of costs right down the line from producer to consumer."

Ellison's proposal to modify the OPA price-fixing method now in effect included the following changes:

"Fix the price of the commodities at their source — say at the farmer's level. This price is to be such as to allow the farmer a fair profit over the cost of production."

"Allow the processor an over-all markup based upon the historical margin of profit applicable to his business."

"Allow the wholesaler a fixed margin of profit, say that normally earned in his business."

"Allow the retailer a fixed margin of profit — approximating that normally earned in his business."

"By this method, prices once fixed could be kept fixed as there would be no variable factors involved. To meet hardship cases and inequalities in exceptional instances, subsidies might then be beneficially used," Ellison concluded.

The Marylander said he would push the plan in the present session of Congress if necessary.

Judge Leigh held it was not necessary to decide whether the "facts alleged in the editorial were true or untrue," but agreed with the newspaper statement that a charge of "inciting to riot" could have been made by Judge Touart "under the facts alleged."

"Judge Leigh's decision is a complete substantiation of the right of newspapers to continue unobstructed publication of critical editorial opinions."

"The Press-Register's criticisms of Judge Touart's failure to cite for trial on criminal charges a man accused of inciting a race riot, was a duty which our newspaper owed to this community."

employed in releasing him "fell into an abyss and have not been seen since," it was reported. "How many are still living is not known at the present."

This narration, recorded by the Associated Press, topped a long series of almost unconnected tales concerning withdrawal of the ponderous-jawed Mussolini from Italian custody to the protective wing of Adolf Hitler.

Reports filtered across Italy's borders, however, that the rebirth of Fascism had not been well received in that embattled country.

The Italian army reportedly was solidly against Mussolini, and the United Nations radio at Algiers said bitter opposition to the Germans was spreading all over Italy, with many outbreaks of fighting in the streets of Rome itself.

Whereabouts Is Secret

The whereabouts of Mussolini, object of what the Nazis described as a spectacular "rescue" by German parachute troops two days ago, remained an enemy secret. The German radio said further announcements about the new Fascist government would come from Mussolini himself.

The same broadcast declared that Edda Ciano, wife of the former Italian foreign minister and ambassador to the Vatican, Count Galeazzo Ciano, was with Mussolini's family. It denied, however, that Ciano was on his way to Rome to join the new Fascist government.

"Apart from everything else, the events which occurred in the last session of the Fascist Grand Council make it impossible for Ciano to hold any post in the Fascist government or party," the German broadcast said.

"This War Will Become Bigger and Tougher... During the Long Months to Come"

Franklin D. Roosevelt

Italy has fallen—but the war is not over and you know it! Think of Berlin and Tokio—think of the men dying at this moment.

Can we, you and I, afford to let them down—to turn their battlefield victory into a homefront defeat? Let's buy more War Bonds than ever... let's back up their victory with ours—the success of the 3rd War Loan!

There are battles coming—tough, bloody, hard-to-win battles—before this war is over. And it's the last battle that counts. We've got to back up our fighting men...we've got to buy War Bonds with every dollar, every dime we can scrape up.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT said it, as Commander-in-Chief:

"I say that we Americans will not be satisfied to send our troops into the fire of the enemy with equipment only equal to that of the enemy. We are determined to provide our troops with overpowering superiority of quality and quantity of arms and armaments..."

Our fighting men will do their job—it's up to you, personally, to keep their victories safe by buying War Bonds NOW with every dollar you can—not with what you'd ordinarily save or invest, but more—every bit more you can manage.

Spears Bringing Liner Football Out of a Coma

Untried Talent and Practice Are Coach's Greatest Problems

By JOHN F. CHANDLER

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Sept. 14.—Dr. Clarence W. Spears is gradually bringing University of Maryland football out of a coma.

For a while it appeared that the gridiron game hereabouts might pop off without regaining consciousness. But some deft manipulation by the good Doc cheated the undertaker, who almost had the black wagon backed up to Byrd stadium several weeks ago when army trainees were told definitely they must shun that rough racket and stick to calisthenics.

True, the Old Liners will struggle along on crutches, generally speaking, and may close the season in a wheelchair—as a whole—although Spears emphasizes that the idea is to "carry on the sport for the duration."

Aside from untried talent and whoppers schedule juggling, Doc's greatest problem is practice. He's finally resorted to night workouts. Army trainees get laboratory priority, another new wrinkle, and civilian students must take lab work in late afternoon.

However some idea of the probable lineup is provided by Spears, who has shifted players considerably to balance experience and weight.

Tentatively he has Jack Hurson, a 200-pound tackle from Washington, D. C., at left end, with Ralph Pico, 180, Bridgeport, Conn., at the other wing. Hank Rock, a 190-pound new arrival from Washington, is filling left tackle, with right tackle assigned to Hubert Moody, 180, one of three Racine, Wis., tenders.

Dick Terry, from Forest Park, Baltimore, is a hard-scraping center despite his 170 pounds, and Pete Karangian, 175, Baltimore, and Les Daly, 180, Washington, lead the guard parade. Both guards played with the 1942 frosh.

Quarterback seems a tossup between two 170-pounders, Gordon Taylor, of Racine, and Joe Makar, who starred with Mount St. Josephs, Baltimore.

Another Racine recruit, 180-pound

Allegany Will Open Nine-Game Football Schedule Here Friday

Allegany high's footballers will open a nine-game schedule when they launch Cumberland's 1943 scholastic grid campaign Friday night at 8 o'clock by opposing Somerset (Pa.) high on the Fort Hill stadium field.

Somerset, coached by George Pfronger, who turned out an undefeated team at Meyersdale (Pa.) high last fall, has already opened its season, turning back the Conemaugh Township eleven, of Davidsburg, Pa., 13-0.

Somerset showed a strong ground attack and amassed 237 yards in running plays. The Somersets defense yielded only eight yards. In first downs, Pfronger's outfit gained a ten-three edge.

Allegany hasn't been topped in football since the 1940 season, the 1941 and 1942 Blue and White teams coming through their campaigns undefeated. However, this fall the Campers have a new coach, Walter L. "Bill" Bowers, and only one holdover regular from last year and from the way things look, Allegany is going to find its opening game a tough assignment.

Coach Bowers said last night that the weekend of September 24-25 is open and probably will remain so. All but two of Allegany's contests will be staged here with Cumberland.

Charles Schoenherr, is at fullback and may blossom into one of Maryland's best running backs, along with Joe Pokorny, left halfback from Baltimore City college. Pokorny, twice All-Maryland scholar-athlete, tips 190, and passes as well as kicks. A little 160-pounder, Bill Hickman, of Baltimore Poly, who also punts and passes, is at right half.

Opener Set for Sept. 25

Maryland will be short on experienced reserves and the original seven of fifty has shrunk to thirty-seven—but Spears hopes the new fall term will produce some needed assistance.

As for the schedule, which apparently is subject to change without notice, latest reports had it this way:

Sept. 25—Curtis Bay Coast Guard; Oct. 2—Wake Forest; 9—Richmond army base; 16—West Virginia at Morgantown; 23—Penn State; 30—Bainbridge Naval Training Station; Nov. 6—Virginia at Charlottesville; 13—Bainbridge Navy at Bainbridge Md.; 20—open; 25—VMI at Roanoke, Va.

Boxing Will Do Bit for Legless 9-Year-Old Girl

Sellout Crowd of 4,000 Expected To Attend Benefit Show

ELIZABETH, N. J., Sept. 14 (AP)—The "hard-hearted" boxing fraternity is coming to the fore once again tomorrow to aid some one far removed from its own sphere.

Under the sponsorship of the Newark Star-Ledger, a benefitistic show will be held at Twin City bowl for Mary Drury, nine-year-old East Orange girl who lost both her legs under a railroad train December while running home with ice cream for her birthday party.

Frank Casale, sports editor of the paper, estimated Mary, who spent many months in a hospital, would receive about $10,000. This, he added, would be made up of all profits from the show and contributions sent to the paper from people in all walks of life.

He predicted a sell-out crowd of 4,000 would see the show, capped by ten-rounders between Lightweights Bob Ruffin and Al Guido, of New York, and Tippy Larkin, of Garfield, New Jersey's 135-pound champion, and Patsy Spataro, of New York.

Many boxers offered to perform for nothing, he said. When told the card was filled, they due out of their pockets. Two-Ton Tony Galento, who brought in $25 yesterday, just about spoke for them all when he said:

"Now, listen, I'm not giving this money to get my picture in the paper. The stories I've read about this kid did something to me inside. I know I have a reputation of being a cold, hard-hearted guy, but Mary Drury softened me up and she'll soften anybody who has a 'ticker.'

Mary, who is now learning to walk on artificial legs, won't be at the show because it will be past her bed-time, but she's wondering if she'll be able to get any sleep "thinking about all those swell people."

Gerry Ramsey Joins Bainbridge Squad

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 14 (AP)—Gerry Ramsey, All-American guard last season and spark plug of William and Mary's 1942 Southern conference championship team, reported for the first time today to Coach Joe Maniaci, of the Bainbridge Naval Training Station football squad.

Ramsey was teamed up with Florida, Illinois line star, on the Commodores "C" unit as Maniaci drove his charges through a long contact drill in preparation for their scrimmage with the Washington Redskins tomorrow.

The game will be held at the Tome athletic field at 5 p. m. and will be staged before 4,000 recruits at the naval station, officials said.

Sinkwich Signs Lions' Contract

DETROIT, Sept. 14 (AP)—Frankie Sinkwich, former All-American half-back at Georgia who was honorably discharged from the United States Marines last week for physical reasons, signed tonight to play with the Detroit Lions of the National Professional Football League.

Owner Fred L. Mandel, Jr., of the Lions, announced the signing after a conference with Sinkwich and the star gridiron's father, Ignatius Sinkwich, who had come here from their home in Youngstown, O.

Immediately after the formalities, the star of the southern gridiron went to the Lions' training camp at the West Shore Golf club at Grosse Ile, a suburb, apparently ready to go to work directly. He probably will play in the Lions' season opener here against the Chicago Cardinals Sunday.

There has been more than the usual amount of gossip as to how many boxing champions are coming along from our service forces of more than ten million men.

Most of these have had their share of boxing instruction under the care of the best ring men any country could offer.

Most of these have been caught young and in good condition. The natural belief is that hundreds, perhaps, thousands, will come along to make us forget those who have held the headlines from John L. Sullivan to Joe Louis, from Joe Gans to Bob Montgomery.

But the odds are it won't be that way.

Along this line we asked the advice of Lieutenant-Commander Jack Dempsey at his coast guard headquarters.

"As close as I can figure it," Jack said, "around 30,000 men have been under our supervision in ring instruction."

"Most of them have been great boys, keen and willing. But so far as boxing goes if we could get one real, high-grade champion out of the 30,000, I'd be quite satisfied."

What a Champion Needs

"These odds are actually too short," Dempsey continued. "This would mean that from an army of 100,000 men we'd get 300 boxing champions. The odds are we won't get twenty ring stars. It's tough game—the toughest of all!"

The Old Mauler is right. The high-class boxing or ring crop is the shortest parade, the smallest group, in sport.

I asked Dempsey to name the main ingredients a ring champion needs.

"First," he said, "ability to take and ability to give it. These are about 50-50. A good fighter must be able to hand out punishment and to handle his share of the same."

"After that come speed and quick reflexes. You must see your opening and make your move in the same split second. A good fighter must have foot action and fast-moving hands. Not many have quick reflexes."

"They may see an opening but the message from mind to fist, you might call it, travels too slowly. This is a common weakness."

"I said before, give and take qualities were needed. But you can't afford to take too much, especially around the head. When that happens there is little coordination left between mind or brain and muscle."

Lacking the Knack

"What about natural knack which is hard to define or explain?" I asked.

"That's the bigger part. For example from the 30,000 service men I've worked with or watched, we find many who are well-built, strong, fast and game. But you can have all that and still not be a champion golfer or great ballplayer or a Baugh or a Huston. This goes double in the fight game."

"Think it over. We've had only about sixteen heavyweight champions in sixty-years—from Sullivan to Louis. And a few of these were not hot."

"Knack is something I can't explain. I guess nobody else can. Jim Corbett developed his boxing hammer and chisel and chip out their share of the massive structures to take home for door stops or something."

"Joe Louis was born with fast moving hands. Even when he was first coming up Joe could deliver three or four punches as fast you could only see one or two. I don't think I've ever seen hands move faster than Louis', considering all the power they carried. Fast hands that carry no punishment of course don't mean so much."

"Harry Greb had a pair that could move in a hurry," I suggested. Dempsey grinned. "I found that out in a couple of training camps. I never saw so much whistling leather in my life."

After all, Dempsey is confident that after the war the general boxing average will be lifted to a higher notch than it has ever known before.

COULD BE HELPING WIN THE WAR!

As transportation merchants of long standing in this city, we are in a position to see that idle cars be put into the hands of war workers who need such transportation. That's part of our wartime duty. Have you such a car—a second car, perhaps—or any automobile you could do without? If you'll see us, we'll pay you the top cash price for it (and used car prices today are at an all-time high).
